Exercise 6 - Homophones in Context

Fill in each blank in the paragraph below with the correct homophone. All the words will come from the homophones you have learned in this booklet.

Family Road Trip: The sun was barely up when the Loughlin family set off on their big trip to the beach. They had packed the car the night before, so they were on the road by six o'clock. Mum and Dad were excited to start the journey, and they're hoping to arrive by noon. In the back seat, the two children played car games together to pass the time. After a couple of hours, Jenna groaned, "Are we there yet? It's too hot, and I'm getting bored." Her younger brother, Max, was allowed to bring his tablet, but Dad said, "Keep the volume low, please." Suddenly, Dad had to brake hard because a rabbit darted across the road. He carefully steered around a hole in the road and then continued driving. Where are we now?" Max asked, peering out the window as they passed an old red barn. "We still have about an hour to go," Mum sighed. "But you're doing great, kids. Just hang in there." Even though the ride felt long, it's all part of the adventure, and they knew the fun at the beach would be worth it.

The Haunted House: It was past midnight when Lucy and her best friend tiptoed into the old, abandoned mansion at the end of the street. People said the place was haunted by a ghost, and they both knew it was a risky idea to explore it at night. The front door creaked on its rusty hinges as they pushed it open and stepped inside. By the light of their torches, they saw a grand staircase and began to creep up the stairs. At the top of the staircase hung a large portrait of a stern-looking woman dressed in a long black gown, as if she was in mourning. Her painted eyes seemed to stare right at the girls. Suddenly, a floorboard creaked behind them. Too frightened to stay another second, Lucy and her friend turned and ran. They dashed down the stairs, past an old grandfather clock, and out the front door into the night. They didn't stop running until they were safely home, promising each other never to sneak into that mansion again.

A Busy School Day: Jack had a very busy day at school. That morning, he nearly forgot to wear his school tie, but his mum reminded him before he left home. During assembly, the principal Mr. Green, welcomed everyone and spoke about the importance of kindness. He said that treating others well is a key principle of their school community. In the first lesson, Jack's English teacher chose him to read a poem aloud to the class. Jack read clearly and confidently. At break time, he and his friends played football outside until the bell rang. Later, in art class, Jack painted a landscape of the ocean at sunset. His teacher complimented him on his work, saying, "Your painting is wonderful, and the orange sky and blue water complement each other nicely." At lunch, Jack found a woolly hat on the playground bench and asked, "Whose hat is this?" "I wonder who's missing a hat," his friend replied. In the afternoon, the students wrote letters to their pen pals. Jack remained stationary in his seat for a moment, thinking of what to write. Then he took out his favourite stationery – a pad of ocean-themed writing paper – and began his letter. It had been a long but exciting day full of learning.

Training for the Race: Aoife was training hard for the county athletics championship. She had injured her heel during a practice run a month ago, but she knew it would heal in time for the big race. Aoife had a brand new pair of running shoes that made her feel faster already. Her coach advised her to get plenty of sleep the night before the competition, and she followed his advice. Even though she couldn't run much while recovering, Aoife still practised her starting technique in her mind each day. On the day of the race, she felt nervous but ready. At the sound of the whistle, Aoife sprinted off the starting line. She passed several other runners on the final lap and won first place. All her training had paid off, and she was thrilled with her achievement.

Island Adventure: Tom was thrilled to be flying with his family to a tropical isle for holiday. On the airplane, he sat in an aisle seat next to his dad. Tom kept peeking out the window at the blue ocean below. When they arrived, the island was like paradise to him - golden beaches, palm trees, and clear water. That evening at dinner, Tom's dad said, "Good job son," because he had used chopsticks for the first time. For dessert, Tom enjoyed a big piece of chocolate cake. Later that night, the whole family walked down to the starlit beach. They sat together listening to the gentle waves, enjoying the peace and quiet after a fun-filled day.

Exercise 7 - Find the Homophone Errors

The paragraphs below contain some incorrectly used homophones. Some words are spelled wrong for their meaning. Identify and correct each mistake. (Not every homophone in the paragraph is wrong – some are used correctly!). Circle or underline the errors.

Camping Trip Journal: My family and I went camping for two nights last weekend. It's always an adventure when we go camping, and we even brought our dog along. Mum and Dad packed the car with all their gear. When we arrived at the campsite, Mum and Dad unpacked and set up there tent. It was to hot to start a campfire, so we just made sandwiches for dinner. There was a lake nearby, but no one was aloud to swim without an adult. After eating, we went on a hike. The hole forest was so beautiful at sunset. Climbing the hill was easier than we expected - it was a peace of cake! Our dog loved it out there and wagged it's tail the whole time. At night, we sat by the tent and enjoyed the peace and quiet of nature. I said, "Mum, your the best cook!" because she made the tastiest smores.

School News Report: We had a very eventful day at school today. In the morning assembly, our principle, Mrs. Carter, congratulated us on winning the local football tournament. She complemented all the players on their teamwork and effort. In English class, we wrote thank-you letters on fancy school stationary for the volunteers who helped coach our team. Our teacher gave us some advise on how to improve our letters before we sent them. We where supposed to have maths after break, but Mrs. Carter surprised us with a class party instead. During lunch, I found a jacket and wondered who's it was. After school, we had band practise for the school talent show. The whole day past so quickly that I could hardly believe it was time to go home.
